Art can be defined in so many ways. It depends on the person. It can be a painting, a book, a film or just someone's quote. Through art, one can reach an audience and evoke all manner of emotions in them: from euphoria and melancholy to profound reflection and a desire to change something in their lives. Art has the power to penetrate a person completely, and this is a feeling that not everyone experiences, nor can everyone understand it. And that is precisely where the beauty of art in all its forms lies

Ilia Malinin’s “To build a home”

This performance took place during the ISU 2025 Skating Exhibition Gala in Boston.The programme was intended to pay tribute to the victims of the Flight 5342 tragedy, which included members of the skating community. If I were to say that during that performance he gave his all to the audience and invited them into his world, it would be as if I hadn’t said anything at all. In a beautiful and deeply moving way, he pays tribute to the victims of this tragedy through the choreography he has created. The energy and emotion are so powerful that you can feel them even through the television screen. And no matter how many times you watch it, it strikes you just as powerfully as the first time. His graceful movements, facial expressions and the music all draw the viewer into that atmosphere, into the world he has created to convey the gravity of this tragedy as fully as possible. It is also very moving the way he ends his performance. As the music fades, all his emotions come flooding out and he begins to cry, which lends a sense of beauty to the whole thing and leads us out of that world in the most perfect way

Adelle

She is a singer who lays her soul bare in her lyrics. She pours all her emotions onto the page and then weaves them into beautiful, heart-stirring songs, almost blessing her listeners with her voice. Her fans can feel a deep connection with her, not as a world-famous singer, celebrity or star, but as an ordinary woman with her own struggles. Helps us understand that even people like her can be hurt and have a difficult life, despite the awards, money and fame. Her songs evoke beautiful emotions and prompt all sorts of reflections; for some, they also help them live their lives true to themselves

Art is something that has a deeper meaning, something that touches us deeply, regardless of the form it takes